Show Kahoot	Do	10 minutes	Facilitator will begin the session with their screen shared and the Business Framework Decision Making Scenario Kahoot game loaded and displayed. Kahoot music should be playing in the background. The facilitator should also have Slido up in another tab as well as the deck beginning in full screen on slide 1 for easy transition. All tabs should be pinned and the bookmark bar hidden. Remind learners that CC is available for anyone that would like to avail of a live transcript or closed captioning during the lesson. <ol style="list-style-type: none"><li>1. Create welcoming classroom experience and begin to connect with attendees by welcoming them to Day 2.</li><li>2. Welcome attendees in batches, and instruct them to log into the Kahoot game. Let them know they are encouraged to use a second screen or mobile device for the activity as it is easier to answer questions this way.</li><li>3. Tell the group they can join by entering in the game pin first then their name, or they can scan the QR code with their mobile device to join.</li><li>4. While the class is joining and you are directing them to join the Kahoot, engage the class in conversation. Verbally ask the group, "What popular food dish from your hometown would you recommend someone to try?" Encourage people to come off mute or share in the chat box.</li><li>5. Since this is the first time the group is playing Kahoot, explain how the game works, what to do if someone is not participating in the Kahoot, and remind them of the incentive.<ol style="list-style-type: none"><li>a. Today we are going to reflect on the business framework that you learned about yesterday. As a recap, our business framework is what drives us at Indeed. It is what we believe, and it is how we act on our beliefs and goals to keep innovating and moving forward. We are going to begin by working through a group case study, all together, discussing a tough situation Indeed has been faced with in the past.</li><li>2. We will review the approach that Indeed took and how the decisions that were made were driven by our mission, vision, and values. Then, you'll have an opportunity to draw these connections in your small teams. Together, you and your team will work through another tough situation Indeed was faced with to come up with a potential solution that upholds our business framework.</li></ol> <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Probing Question: Before we get started, who can remind us of the different parts that make up our business framework?</li></ul>
	Say	4 minutes	Transition: Thank you all for reminding us of Indeed's business framework. We will be using this knowledge as we work through our group and breakout activities today. Let's begin with our group activity. Facilitator reads the case study below Group Case Study Background: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• For many years, Indeedians requested more insight into salary bands for jobs internally at Indeed to better understand compensation as they grow their career. There were also questions about salary bands from external candidates applying to jobs at Indeed. Like many companies, Indeed's stance was to not publicly disclose any salary information. How do you think Indeed has responded to these requests for salary transparency?</li></ul>
	Do	10 minutes	Say: Let's take a few minutes to reflect independently on what you believe the path forward and outcome was for Indeed using the guiding questions in your participant workbook and on screen here. After 3 minutes of independent reflection, we will discuss what actually happened and the factors that went into making that decision. Allow group 3 minutes for independent reflection on the case study, direct participants to answer the following questions in their participant workbook (Page 1 of workbook): <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• What immediate next steps do you think Indeed took to solve this challenge?</li></ul>

	Say 1 minute	Transition: Thank you for sharing your thoughts on Indeed's actions and the outcomes. Let's take a look at what actually happened. Facilitator should highlight the parts of the approach and results that were not already mentioned in the above discussion. Facilitator can reference the following for guidance on revealing the solution before moving into probing questions: Approach: Indeed began doing research to understand the average salary of Indeedians for each role and geographic location. Indeed also began working with two consultancy companies, Mercer and Radford, to provide Indeed with anonymous salary surveys from similar external companies within the industry. Indeed wanted to ensure that the salary ranges were consistent with the labor market trends. Results: In 2019, Indeed published the findings of their salary transparency study. As a result, we created an initiative that allows all internal Indeedians and external candidates to see what the salary range is for each role up to the Senior Director level. For individuals who fell below the bottom of the salary range, their salary was adjusted to be within the band. Indeed continues to update salary bands with regular review of market trends as they change. Indeed's stance is that Indeedians are job seekers even when they are looking for internal roles, and we should provide as much information as possible to help them. We also encourage employers to do the same in their hiring practices. Before moving to the next slide, dive deeper with the group to have them think about what parts of the business framework drove the direction of this approach and results. Ask: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• What parts of the business framework do you think influenced the decisions made and why?</li> <li>• Which teams do you think were involved in these decisions?</li> </ul>

They also looked at this testing in specific markets to determine if it would benefit all job seekers in all markets, and what regional requirements might exist.</li> <li>Results: As a result of our research and testing, Indeed uncovered that job seekers were more likely to click the job listings on the search engine results page if the 'sponsored' label was not present. This was likely because they assumed jobs with the sponsored label were appearing because they were paid for, not because they were relevant opportunities. To ensure job seekers didn't miss relevant job postings, we decided to remove the 'sponsored' tag on job listings in the majority of our markets. To ensure Indeed remains compliant with local guidelines, Indeed left the 'sponsored' tag in our Japan market. In India, we have changed the 'sponsored' label to say 'Hot Job'. This allows us to stay compliant while also attracting job seekers to relevant roles for them. Since we no longer have 'sponsored' jobs notated in search results, we now display a mix of sponsored and non-sponsored jobs on each search page based on what is relevant for job seekers. At Indeed, we are continuously testing how we can create a better experience for job seekers and help our employers get closer to the hire. By making these changes, we are upholding these beliefs.</li> </ul> Before moving to the next slide, ask the spokesperson for Group 1 to share what their team came up with connecting this decision to the business framework. Ask:

The Indeed Hiring Platform is a product that allows employers to automate much of their hiring process and meet job seekers at the interview phase, once the job seeker has gone through automated screening. After the job seeker passes the automated screening, they are able to RSVP to an employer's interview. Demographic information that is gathered when a job seeker RSVPs includes age, race, ethnicity, gender, disability status, and LGBTQ+ community. Indeed conducted research in advance to understand how this information could be gathered in a legally approved process and stored in a secure way. By keeping this information collection optional, job seekers don't have to feel pressure to disclose information they may not feel comfortable sharing.  Cannabis Dispensary Job Postings An important note: If you're looking for a job in the cannabis industry, you may need to consider where you live. Some states and countries have laws that prohibit or restrict the use of cannabis. It's important to check the laws in your area to ensure you're not breaking any laws.	Ask	4 minutes	Transition: Thanks Group 2 for your thoughts, let's head to Group 3. The facilitator should read the screen aloud so that the entire audience is familiar with the topic.  Approach &amp; Results Indeed wants to ensure our site includes as many real, active, and safe jobs that are hiring now as possible, and we want them to be shared with relevant job seekers. In some states and countries, marijuana is legal while in others it is not. Indeed had to keep this in mind when exploring whether or not we could or should allow these types of jobs on Indeed. After evaluation of these types of jobs, it was the decision of the business to treat these jobs just as any other job, with the caveat that the location in which the job is posted must have marijuana legalized. At the end of the day, the jobs these employers are looking to post on Indeed are legal in their location, they are real and hiring now, and they may be of interest to our job seekers in these markets. The Trust and Safety team will continue to review these jobs and ensure they are only posted where marijuana is legalized. This includes both states in the US as well as markets around the world. This decision has allowed many employers to make the hires needed to keep their businesses running and has also provided employment opportunities for many job seekers. Before moving to the next slide, ask the spokesperson for Group 3 to share what their team came up with for connecting this decision to the business framework. Ask: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• What parts of the business framework do you think influenced the decisions made and why?</li> <li>• Which teams do you think were involved in these decisions?</li> </ul>	Ask	1 minute	Transition: Thanks for sharing your group's insights! 	Ask	1 minute	Transition: Thanks for sharing your group's insights! Let's reveal the actual Approach and Results. Facilitator should highlight the parts of the approach and results that were not already mentioned by the spokesperson. Facilitator can reference the following for guidance on revealing the solution before moving into probing questions: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Approach: Both job seekers and employers are vital to Indeed, and our best solutions have to consider and balance the needs of both. To determine how to best move forward, Indeed chose to help both justice impacted individuals as well as help employers find ways to hire these individuals.</li> <li>Results: In 2022, Indeed introduced its 'Fair Chance' initiative along with its new educational landing page, which focuses on teaching employers the benefits of hiring justice impacted individuals, as well as focusing on helping these job seekers get work. We have also published new filters within the Resume database as of September 2022 that allow employers to search for 'Fair Chance' individuals. Job seekers can also search for jobs that are tagged as 'Fair Chance' positions, indicating they are open to considering job seekers with criminal records. There are additional resources available for job seekers to help address barriers they may have including access to a free ride to an interview, assistance clearing a record, as well as providing computers to individuals who are eligible. By educating employers about the value of the lived experience of justice impacted job seekers, we can help them understand the benefits of hiring these individuals. The program's resources for job seekers help them overcome barriers to access employment. This is a perfect example of how Indeed helps both employers and job seekers find the right match.</li> </ul> Before moving to the next slide, ask the spokesperson for Group 4 to share what their team came up with for connecting this decision to the business framework. Ask:
